How To Measure

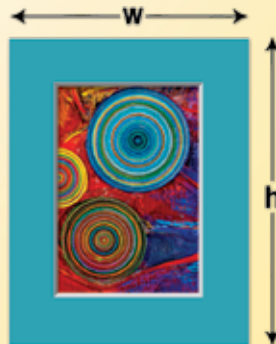

How to measure for your frame, acrylic & backing board

For info on how to measure for matting see page 40

Measure the exact width (w) & height (h) of the outside dimensions (including the mat) of your artwork and round to the nearest 1/8".

Frames custom-cut to a fraction of an inch are priced to the next whole inch (i.e. for a 14 1/2" size, use the 15" price)

Note: For stretched canvas, measure from wrapped corner to wrapped corner.

Point Drivers

Fleximaster Point Driver

Holds 170 flexible points. Rear stabilizer for upright standing.

#PP2

Flexible Framer's Points 3,700/box

#POINTS2

Fletcher Point Driver

No double feeding & jamming. Easy to load. (Not for use with stretched canvas)

#PP

Wax-Free Stacked Points 3,000/box

How to Measure for Custom Cut Mats

Three measurements define a mat:

1. window opening size
2. mat border widths (for each side)
3. total outside mat size

What Size Should My Window Opening Be?

Subtract 1/4" in each dimension, from the outside edges of the art being framed, for a 1/8" overlap on each side.

How Big Should I Make My Mat?

Mat size is a matter of personal taste; we recommend borders of at least 2 1/2" in most cases. Border widths usually increase with the size of the artwork, but wide mats also help add weight to small pieces. Making the bottom border slightly wider than the top border helps balance artwork hung at eye level.

Adding Additional Mats

Choose the offset (how much of the mat beneath you want showing) for each side. The border width for the second mat, minus the offset, is the border width of the top mat. Repeat for each side.

Remember:

- Outside mat size is the same for all mats in multiple-mat presentations.
- Outside mat size is also the size of the frame you'll need.

$$L'' + w'' + R'' = W''$$

$$T'' + h'' + B'' = H''$$

$$W'' \times H'' = \text{Outside mat size}$$
